CANADA GOES FORWARD IN AIR ADVANCE

Major-General J. H. MacBrien Speaks to Large Gathering Here on Needs of Civil Aviation

PRaises PILOTS TRAINED IN WAR

Commerce, Communications, Mails and Defence Can Be Stimulated, He Argues

VICTORIA is to have a branch of the Canadian Air League, which is now in course of organization throughout Canada, and at the same time a flying club will be formed for the training of young men and women who may wish to learn the art of operating flying machines. In connection with the latter proposal, which is now being aided by Government action, there will be an effort made to bring about co-operation between the Victoria Aero Club, which was recently incorporated in the city, and the flying club to be organized. It is proposed that there shall be a blending of them into one organization.

This was the decision reached at a well-attended meeting of those interested held in the Armories last evening and which was addressed by Major-General J. H. MacBrien, head of the Air Service of Canada. The speaker outlined the objects of the proposed Canadian Air League and the advantages that were likely to accrue not only in a commercial way, but also as a means of auxiliary defence by the formation of such a body.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE

In order to take the initial steps in the work, a provisional committee was named to bring about the heartiest co-operation in the formation of a branch of the Canadian Air League in this city. This committee consists of Hon. W. C. Nichol, Mr. W. J. Spencer, Mr. B. C. Nicholas, Captain A. W. Carter and Mr. R. H. B. Keir.

Another committee comprising Captain A. W. Carter, Mr. J. E. Eve and Captain I. W. Avedis, was named to confer with the provisional officers of the Victoria Aero Club recently organized, and reach a basis for the bringing into existence of a flying club in the city.

In this connection General MacBrien intimated that the Government was ready to co-operate to the very fullest extent with any existing club in the carrying out of the plan proposed to aid in training young airmen. A similar statement to that which existed here had been met with in Regina, he said, where a club existed. There was a coalescing of the activities being brought about in that city.

It was explained that in relation to the local club incorporation had been brought about, and it would be necessary to proceed along the lines of that incorporation to a large extent.

GREAT TIME SAVER

In addressing the meeting General MacBrien said that the establishment of air routes across the continent through Canada would make for greater cohesion among the various parts of the Dominion. The map of Canada would be cut in two by the establishment of such a route, and Victoria, being near the middle, was as was Winnipeg now. There should be no difficulty about the making of the trip from Victoria to Ottawa in about two days, and from a day and a half to two days.

There was a patriotic appeal in the address of the speaker. He expressed the feeling that Canadians did not take the necessary steps to establish air routes throughout Canada there was the danger that in this country the aircraft in this country.

Girl Student Comes From Far Northern Home

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—Traveling by water and rail from her home, 200 miles north of La Pas to Toronto, Miss Thompson reached Winnipeg yesterday. After a day spent in becoming accustomed to city crowds, she left this evening on the Canadian Pacific Railway express for Toronto, where she will spend the next two years.

Miss Thompson, who is the daughter of a mining engineer, has traveled steadily since October 19. With a brother, she started from her home in a canoe on Wednesday, reaching La Pas on the following Tuesday. En route, Miss Thompson and her brother had to make a sixteen-mile portage and had some rather exciting moments shooting rapids.

With the exception of her mother and sister, Miss Thompson has seen no white women for three years. Mail is delivered about once in four months to her northern home. But the installation of radio this winter will keep her family more in touch with the outside world. "Winter is the loveliest time of the year," she says.

JURY ACQUITS THREE INDIANS

Verdict of "Not Guilty" in Charge Arising From Murder of E. K. Leach at Tofo

DECISION REACHED AT NANAIMO ASSIZE

NANAIMO, Oct. 28.—After twenty-five minutes' deliberation, a petit jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" in the case of three West Coast Indians, charged with the murder of E. K. Leach at Tofo on August 29.

Mr. Justice Murphy commenced his charge to the jury at 2 o'clock, concluding at 3:55.

During the morning sitting, Mr. V. B. Harrison, counsel for the accused, stated that there were no witnesses for the defence, and Mr. H. A. MacLean, K.C., Crown Prosecutor, presented his case to the jury.

In a lengthy address, in which he outlined all the story as told by the Crown witnesses, he endeavored to connect the three Indians who, according to evidence, had been seen in Thomas' store, on the wharf, and on Leach's boat, and had left in the same direction with Leach's boat shortly before the tragedy occurred, and who were drinking with the government guardian at Tofo.

Mr. MacLean said it was a case for conviction, as the accused's evidence as given when arrested could be treated as false. The evidence was circumstantial, and they as jurors must act as they would in considering serious affairs of their own.

RECORD VOTERS' LIST IS ASSURED

REGISTRATIONS ALREADY 346 IN ADVANCE OF THOSE OF LAST YEAR

City Clerk's Office Busy Early and Late But Will Close at 5 P.M. Monday

Everything points to a record voters' list for the forthcoming civic election. The latest report at the City Clerk's office today was that registrations of legal voters had reached 346, as compared with 1,182 for the whole of October, 1926. This is an increase of 346.

There are still 432 persons eligible to vote, and they are urged to get on the list either today or Monday. The City Clerk's office has been kept open late all this week and will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday. Registrations will be received from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. After Monday no one may register on the voters' list. City officials are anxious that every one who is entitled to a vote should be able to use it at the next civic election.

HUMAN CHAIN SAVES WOMAN FROM DEATH

NIAGARA FALLS, Oct. 28.—Two women and a man formed themselves into a human chain tonight and saved from going over the falls, near the American shore, Mrs. Michaela. The woman was taken from the water about 150 feet below the cataract. The rescuers were Dan Vandergriff, of Peoria, Ill.; his wife and his wife's sister, Mrs. W. J. Taylor, of Cleveland.

ADDITION TO CITY HALLS IN PROSPECT

Public Works Committee Will Recommend to Council Demolition of Old City Jail

WILL IMPROVE LAND DEPARTMENT

New Section to City Hall Proposed for Council Chamber, Committee Rooms and Press Room

DEMOLITION of the old city jail, adjoining the City Hall, will be recommended to the City Council at the Monday night meeting of the public works committee, of which Alderman William Marchant is chairman.

While the present action is just to provide better lighting and sanitary arrangements for the Land Commissioner's office, it is planned to eventually construct a new portion to the City Hall on the old jail site to provide a better council chamber and committee room than there are at present.

At the present time the City Council Chamber is only half its original size, a portion of it having been constructed for the purchasing agent and city solicitor's offices and committee room. The only committee room that is in the building is now being used for the industrial and water consultant's office, so that now there is no committee room. The council chamber, in addition, being small, is poorly lighted, ventilated and very noisy. The acoustics are such that it is hard to hear what the various aldermen are saying when debating various questions.

In the new wing it is planned to have a more modern and spacious council chamber with committee rooms and a room for the press.

Alderman Marchant, in discussing the plan said that at present he does not know if there is even sufficient money to have the old jail torn down, but conditions at the City Hall were such that something would shortly have to be done to provide more accommodation. As it is now, he stated, the vault space in some of the departments is such that many important documents have been left on shelves as there is no room in the vaults for them.

The council chamber, committee rooms, Mayor's office and other rooms for the aldermanic body should be on the top floor and the various civic offices confined as much as possible to the ground floor.

MODERN HENS LAY IMPROVED EGGS

CALGARY, Oct. 28.—Because of the educational work of poultry associations and such organizations, hens are now laying larger eggs, was one of the main contentions of C. N. Ham, of Montreal, chairman of the Express Trade Association, in urging the Board of Railway Commissioners at its opening session in Calgary on Friday that the board grant permission to establish an estimated weight for billing of fifty-eight pounds for thirty dozen cases of eggs, instead of the present estimated weight of fifty-five pounds.

ALBERTA TO HAVE AGENT IN LONDON

EDMONTON, Oct. 28.—The London office of the Alberta Government, opened experimentally in the early part of the year, will be continued, the Government having decided that permanent representation at the heart of the Empire is desirable. Hon. Herbert Greenfield, former Premier of Alberta, has been offered the post of London agent and has accepted it, commencing work of which he is at present engaged.

Premier Brownlee was impressed on his visit to England by the manner with the possibilities of creating and stimulating greater interest in Alberta among the people of that country, and also with the opportunities of effective publicity work through a London office.

While the present action is just to provide better lighting and sanitary arrangements for the Land Commissioner's office, it is planned to eventually construct a new portion to the City Hall on the old jail site to provide a better council chamber and committee room than there are at present.

RIOT SCENES ENACTED AS LINER SINKS

Full Story of Disaster Off Brazil Coast Gradually Comes to Light—Sailors Break Into Bar

LIFEBOATS RUSHED AND OVERCROWDED

Ship Sacked by Some of Immigrants and Stewards—Intoxicated Members of Crew Create Dismay

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 28.—Looting by steerage passengers and stewards, drunkenness of sailors and a wild scramble for boats added to the horrors of the sinking of the Princess Mafalda, according to a Rio de Janeiro dispatch to La Nación, quoting from a statement of Georges Grenade, resident of Buenos Aires, claims to have sent to the Italian royal maritime commissioner.

Saying he was near the bridge, where Captain Gull was giving orders, Grenade declared, "We were dismayed by the appearance of some sailors with liquor they had stolen from the bar in the main saloon. One of the sailors appeared to be completely drunk and invited us to drink with him. The ship was sacked by some of the immigrants and stewards. One instance was the robbery of valuables from Madame Helen Giron, whose valises were clandestinely opened at the onset of the disaster."

LIFEBOATS RUSHED Grenade said the captain gave orders for the salvage of mail and valuables entrusted to his care. Passengers were called to the deck by the blowing of the ship's siren, says the statement, and "immediately afterwards steps were taken to lower lifeboats for the women and children of the first class passengers, when emigrants of the steerage and stokers and others of the crew rushed the boats."

Grenade declared the first two lifeboats launched were swamped because of overloading and most of their occupants drowned.

ENGINEER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

MR. A. TUDOR, OF SAYWARD BUILDING, WITHIN FEW FEET OF EXPLOSION

Defective Oil Burner Causes Blast Which Blows Out Fire Box Plates and Scatters Bricks

Mr. A. Tudor, one of the engineers of the Sayward Building, had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon when an explosion occurred in the furnace which provides steam heat for the large business block.

He was sitting in the rear of the furnace eating his lunch about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. C. W. Brooks, another engineer, was in the engine room. Suddenly a terrific explosion blew the plates off the rear portion of the fire box near where Mr. Tudor was sitting, cracked the foundation of the boiler and scattered bricks and plaster in all directions. Mr. Tudor was hit by falling pieces of brick, but came through uninjured.

Had he been a few feet nearer he would have been struck by the plates as they were blown out.

The explosion could be heard throughout the building, while those on the first and second floors felt the vibration. It was caused by a defective oil burner. Repairs are now being effected and the furnace is being converted for the use of coal.

CHINESE WALK OUT OF VANCOUVER JAIL

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 28.—Two Chinese prisoners, one convicted of theft and the other awaiting trial on a charge of having narcotic drugs in his possession, are at liberty tonight as the result of an effortless jail break at police headquarters. Chang was convicted this morning in police court on a charge of breaking and entering, and was remanded until Saturday morning for sentence. Through a clerical error Chang's case was marked "Dismissed" on the records, and the court sheet sent to the jail. When his name was called for release, Chin Hin, charged with having morphine and cocaine in his possession, who had been remanded for hearing, stepped forward, signed off and took his departure. Before the error was discovered on the court sheets, Chang was also released. They have not yet been located by the police.

Smallpox in Ottawa Is Still Increasing

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—The previous high mark of seventy-eight cases in Ottawa's smallpox outbreak was passed this afternoon when seven new victims were admitted to the Hopewell Island Isolation Hospital. As three patients had previously been dismissed, there are now forty-nine cases in the hospital, while thirty-five others are under surveillance at their quarantined homes.

Drastic Plans Followed In Taking First Census Of Turkish Metropolis

In Constantinople and Also in Many Other Cities All Inhabitants Are Ordered to Remain in Homes During Day of Counting—Populace Suspects Tax Device

No Automobiles or Street Cars Run; Harbors and Highways Are Deserted

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 28.—Turkey today underwent a novel, and to most of its inhabitants, unpalatable experience—the taking of its first census. Everyone was rigorously forbidden to leave his domicile until the census was completed. The suspicious populace was convinced that the only possible move in such a counting of heads was to facilitate the attentions of the tax-gatherers.

Some 50,000 officials were designated to take the census. Many special difficulties had to be met and overcome, especially in Constantinople and other big towns where many streets have never been named and there are scores of streets bearing the same name. It was decided that the only plan was to keep the people at home while the counting was proceeding. For this, Friday, which is a Turkish rest day, was chosen. From the first streak of dawn today Constantinople seemed a city of the dead. It was plunged in profound silence. Stores were closed and pavements deserted. Not an auto or trolley car or any other conveyance on the streets.

Some 6,500 officials made the count in this city. The data collected included the names of men, women and children, with their age, religion, native language, profession, and state of health and education.

Police and soldiers assisted census officials by enforcing the regulations to keep indoors. They were posted on street corners, watching for any persons on the streets without passes. The people accepted the enforced detention with resignation.

One of the most striking scenes was the deserted and quiet appearance of the Bosphorus and the Horn, which are usually alive with thousands of vessels flitting between European and Asiatic shores.

HOUSE MEETS IN RUMANIA

Premier Disappoints Parliament by Failing to Reveal Contents of Plot Correspondence Seized

ORDER REPORTED IN KINGDOM

BUCHAREST, Oct. 28.—Foreign newspapers containing Prince Carol's interview in which he confirmed having sent letters to Rumanian leaders, were not distributed when they arrived today, since any article containing the name of the former Crown Prince of Rumania is declared contraband.

Despite the flurry that followed upon the arrest of M. Manolescu and the seizure at his home of letters from Prince Carol, complete order and tranquility tonight prevailed throughout Rumania.

Princess Helen, Carol's abandoned wife, remained in Bucharest with her young son, King Michael, despite the fact that her brother, the former King George of Greece, left today for Florence to see his newly betrothed sister, Princess Irene.

Queen Marie, Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas were at Sinaia, where the royal country palace is situated, preparing to celebrate the Dowager Queen's fifty-first birthday tomorrow.

IN PARLIAMENT

Premier Bratiano has disappointed Parliament, press and the public by failing to disclose the contents of letters exchanged between Carol and his adherents in Rumania which have disturbed the country for a week and excited the curiosity and speculation of all Europe.

In the Chamber of Deputies, which was packed to such an extent that foreign correspondents did not have standing room, the Premier took up the subject, but confined himself to a declaration of intent to make an act of conspiracy against the state which must be punished with the fullest severity allowed by law. The full penalty is five years' imprisonment.

Report has it that the Premier, under further pressure, may reveal the text of the Carol documents at tomorrow's session of Parliament.

Colonel Paul Tredescu, former chief of the army service, of which Carol was once the head, was arraigned today before a court martial on a charge of having a secret code for communicating with the former Crown Prince.

would be made in the United States, and the companies on the other side of the line would be in control of the whole of the routes. The spirit of aggressive action along these lines by the American companies, following the very marked advances that were being made there, as compared with what there was in Canada.

In the Dominion, he pointed out, there was the material needed for the construction of the air machine, and there was the ability on the part of Canadians to act as pilots. This was well evidenced in the way that part of Canadian pilots played in the Imperial Air Forces during the war time. There were some 10,000 who had served in the Imperial forces during the war, many of whom would like to renew their knowledge in this line, and to pass it on to others who might wish to learn.

FLYING CLUBS

In connection with the formation of the flying clubs, which he said was a separate work from that of the Air League, the Government was lending its assistance. These flying clubs were not on a commercial basis. They would be under Government subsidy, and were to be brought into existence for the purpose of affording to young Canadians the opportunity to become trained in the use of flying machines. The Government would issue two planes to the club and make other grants which materially reduced the cost of acquiring a knowledge of aeronautics. The club incumbent upon the clubs to take care of the machines, and to see that the instruction was given, and that every care was taken to avoid danger.

Under this system to be adopted the cost of training for a young person might not be more than $150 in a strong club. In the United States the training would cost $500. There would have to be a qualified instructor, and there would be a committee which would comprise, say, ten ex-pilots. Before the club was authorized there must be thirty enter to train, with ten ex-pilots in addition to the instructor.

The course for the young people would start with a course of lectures, and in this the ex-pilots would be of great assistance to the instructor. Much of this could be done before the machines were received.

The type of machine that had been adopted was of the Moth light aeroplane type. It was the same that had been used by the Irish Free State, and also by Australia. It was in every way a very capable one, and was easily handled and reliable.

AIRWAYS NEEDED

In making his plea for the formation of an Air League, General MacBrien urged that Canada was far behind in the matter of organized airways as compared with many of the other parts of the world. This was nothing in the matter of organized airways in the whole of the country. Experiments were being carried on in the carrying of mail from Rimouski to Montreal and there was to be continued. There would also be some experiments in the winter of carrying mail from Halifax by St. John and on to Montreal. With this established as feasible, it was the intention to call for tenders to establish branches in all the important centres, with headquarters at Montreal. It was the hope to have about twenty or more branches, affiliating with the Air League of the British Empire. The attempt would be made to foster an interest in the subject of aviation in the schools of the Dominion and in the universities. In this latter connection the speaker was of the opinion that aeronautics should be included in the university courses, not as a separate department, but in connection with a general course of engineering.

DEFENCE STANDPOINT

There should be a fostering of the subject from the standpoint of defence of the country. The object would be to keep the League entirely free of political parties, and to make it a body of men and women, with recommendations from time to time to the government, along the lines that the matter could be best served.

Tracing the development of aviation, the speaker showed that an examination of history, especially of mythologies and religions, made clear that flight had ever been a part of the human dream. He pointed out that the first balloon ascent was made by a man named Montgolfier in 1783. Sir John Cayley, in 1842, constructed a model of a flying machine, and in 1903, an airplane was built by the Wright brothers. In 1909, an airplane was built by the Wright brothers. was the intention to call for tenders to establish branches in all the important centres, with headquarters at Montreal. It was the hope to have about twenty or more branches, affiliating with the Air League of the British Empire. The attempt would be made to foster an interest in the subject of aviation in the schools of the Dominion and in the universities. In this latter connection the speaker was of the opinion that aeronautics should be included in the university courses, not as a separate department, but in connection with a general course of engineering.

There should be a fostering of the subject from the standpoint of defence of the country. The object would be to keep the League entirely free of political parties, and to make it a body of men and women, with recommendations from time to time to the government, along the lines that the matter could be best served.

would get no support for his suggestions. The recommendation was made for the purpose of keeping the Council in touch with the expenditures of the school board.

The election of Trustee Strath to the aldermanic board would meet this situation without causing any animosity on the part of the school board.

A keen contest is expected in the aldermanic election, as already a number of candidates have been announced, including one woman, Mr. J. A. Worthington, who led the polls among the new aldermanic candidates last year, again will be in the field. Mr. Worthington drew a large vote, the results of the fifth aldermanic being so close that only a few votes separated each one for the position.

Alderman John Harvey and Alderman Marchant have definitely announced that they will seek reelection, while Aldermen Cuthbert Holmes, Robert Dewar and J. L. Mara are expected to run, although they have not made any definite announcement.

Mrs. H. Crocker has been elected by the Local Council of Women as candidate for alderman. Ex-alderman J. A. Shanks has been approached to run for candidate. He is giving the matter consideration.

INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATE ON HOGS FOR UNITED STATES IS PROTESTED

Strong Organizations Appear Before Railway Commissioners to Present Case

CALGARY, Oct. 28.—With U.S. packers and Alberta livestock men lined up on one side and the Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian Packers on the other, Assistant Chief Commissioners S. J. McLean and C. Lawrence, of the railway commissioners, spent Friday afternoon listening to arguments for and against the increase in the rate on hogs to point to the Northwest United States, effective June 23, last.

The United Grain Growers' Ltd., represented by C. Rice-Jones; the Alberta Co-operative Livestock Producers, Ltd., represented by A. B. Claypool, M.L.A., and Fry & Co., United States Packers, represented by P. Paul, with J. F. Frawley, of the Alberta Attorney-General's Department, acting as counsel for all three, contended that the great development of the hog industry in Alberta within recent years was largely attributable to the entry here of U.S. buyers, and that now with the increase in the freight rate, U.S. buyers would have their purchases curtailed with serious consequences for both the Alberta hog raisers and the U.S. packers.

Moslems and Hindus Confer on Problems

CALCUTTA, Oct. 28.—A conference of Hindu and Moslem leaders, called to solve communal problems under the auspices of the all-India congress, today admitted the right of Moslems to demand that the Hindus hold sacred as a part of their reincarnation theory, at any time, but not in public places. In return, Hindus will be allowed to hold processions with music at any time. A committee yesterday affirmed rights of both Moslems and Hindus to seek proselytes from other religions.

War Chaplain-General Speaks in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Oct. 28.—"You sent your sons to form a living wall. They laid down their lives as a barrier as if to say: 'This is our land, no further shall thou come,'" said Rev. He was introduced by Most Rev. Archbishop de Penier, Mr. W. C. Dumas presided.

Grain Marketing on C.N.R. IS DOUBLING

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—Tremendous increases in grain marketing and loading on the Canadian National Railways this year, as compared to last, are indicated by the figures for the week ending yesterday. Marketing during the week from October 21 to 27 inclusive more than doubled those of the corresponding period last year. The jump was from nine million to twenty million. In the week before, October 14 to 20, close to twelve million bushels were marketed, and the leap from twelve million to twenty is also significant.

LORD ATHLONE GIVEN PRAISE

Brother of Queen Mary Said to Have Had Large Part in Effecting South African Flag Settlement

LIEUT.-COL. AMERY ALSO HELPED

CAPETOWN, S.A., Oct. 28.—New "heroes" of the settlement of the flag issue this week, who had not been mentioned previously, form the subject of an editorial in The Cape Times, the new heroes being the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General, and Lieut.-Col. L. C. Amery, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, who visited South Africa recently in connection with his tour of the British Dominions.

The Times gives credit to Premier Hertzog, former Premier Smuts and Hon. Tielman Roos, Minister of Justice, for their services in bringing about an agreement between the Nationalist Party and the South African Party on the flag question, but says their efforts might have been abortive if it had not been for the wise and impartial influence of the Earl of Athlone.

The Times continues: "As Gen. Smuts remarks, it must be left to history to tell the full part the Earl of Athlone played, but it is enough to say here that the trust in His Excellency's wisdom and impartiality was an important element in the combination that made the negotiations between Premier Hertzog and General Smuts possible."

Then follows a reference in The Times to speeches made by Lieut.-Col. Amery, which "without giving the slightest offence to any section of the community, managed to give South Africa a new outlook that resulted in the abatement of racial passions."

CONTRACT LET FOR RAILWAY

Winnipeg Firm to Build Hudson Bay Railway Grade to Fort Churchill

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—On the recommendation of Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, the government has awarded to the firm of Stewart & Cameron, Limited, Winnipeg, the contract for the construction of the grade of the proposed extension of the Hudson Bay Railway from Mile 356 of the present line to Fort Churchill, which has been chosen as the ocean terminus for the road.

Tenders were called by newspaper advertisement and there was keen competition for the work, no less than seven tenders being received by the department. Of these, the lowest was that of Stewart & Cameron, Limited, proved to be the lowest. The contract calls for the clearing, grubbing, cross laying, grading and culverting of approximately 154 miles of line. As the tender is on a schedule rate basis, the exact amount involved is not ascertainable, but is estimated to be a million and a quarter dollars.

BOARD ADDRESSED BY GENERAL F. A. SUTTON

VANCOUVER, Oct. 28.—That the Peace River country is an area of tremendous agricultural wealth and that the P. O. E. should be extended to tap that area, so that under a proper scheme of land settlement and development it could be made a paying railway operation. These were the conclusions of Gen. Frank A. Sutton, in a stirring luncheon address before the Board of Trade.

"I have no doubt upon the score that such a completed railway will pay," declared General Sutton. "I believe that that work can be accomplished and I have no hesitation in saying that the funds can be arranged in the Old Country to provide every dollar of expenditure that would be necessary to make the operation a success."

WORSTED MILL PROJECT TOLD

Mr. John Moore Explains Situation to Industrial Group of Chamber of Commerce

FRANK STATEMENT OF SITUATION MADE

"I am confident that I can spin yarn in the city of Victoria as well as anywhere else in the world, and in addition I can do it for a longer period," said Mr. John Moore, of Bradford, England, in explaining to the members of the Chamber of Commerce the reasons which had actuated him in selecting this city as a place in which to locate his proposed worsted factory.

Mr. Moore went further and told why he had decided to come here, impressing most favorably the gathering of business men who assembled at the call of the Industrial Group of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday at noon. The situation was met by the speaker with the greatest frankness, he having first propounded the question which he asked might very reasonably be asked as to why, with business in the Old Country, he was ready to come here to start in a new field.

Mr. Moore said that since the war, and in fact for some little time before the Old Country machinery manufacturers had been equipping the rest of the world with textile machinery. From Lancashire had gone mill equipment to Germany and elsewhere. They were in fact established in Japan and India with their cheap labor conditions.

"It is not reasonable to suppose," said he, "that we can equip foreign nations with machinery to make these goods and at the same time compete in the world markets in the selling of the same class of goods."

TARIFF BARRIERS
"Every country in the world is doing its best to shut out British goods. This applied to the United States and Canada. These countries were penalizing Old Country goods in order to induce people to come in and make the same class of goods in these rival countries."

The result, said Mr. Moore, was that in order to compete it had become necessary to speculate in the buying of raw materials abroad and that they might gain some advantage. Under such conditions he had looked about to ascertain where it was best to go. Canada was the most natural place, he felt, because Canada was taking more woolen and worsted goods from England than any other country. With the best customers in this country he had naturally been attracted here. He had found that in the East, Montreal and Toronto, had too long winters, and other conditions there were not the best.

He had as a result of his investigations come to the conclusion that the Pacific Coast was the best place to install and he had decided that it should lie between Victoria and Vancouver.

In opening his address to the members of the group, Mr. Moore explained briefly the difference between worsted yarn and woolen yarn. The former was combed yarn while the latter was matted in the process the manufacturer of worsted yarn endeavored to get rid of the short fibres and retain only the long ones.

REASONS FOR DECISION
Recalling his first arrival here he said that he had been recommended to visit British Columbia by Mr. F. A. Pauline, of whom he spoke as the most laudatory way for the work he was doing for the province in London.

He said that he had come with the idea that a woolen mill was the one that would most likely be needed. He had, on arrival in Canada, made inquiries in the East and had found that the woolen people were having difficulties in connection with their trade. On the other hand he found that the worsted people were doing quite well.

I reached British Columbia, therefore," he said, "with my mind made up that it was not in the woolen line that I would engage. I found that while there was little or no demand for woolen yarn there was a demand for worsted yarn. There were a number of factories in Vancouver that made use of worsted and the yarns were being sold in the stores."

After his return to England he again met Mr. Pauline who induced him to return to the province. He had come and met the people who would be interested and found that the demand was larger than he had at first expected. Experiments had been carried out with the kinds of yarn that he would manufacture and it had been found to be excellent for the purposes. With the business that was offered in Vancouver alone there was sufficient to warrant the starting of the factory. There was a real opportunity, he believed, here and there was no reason why an increased trade could not be worked up on the Prairies.

"I am not here as a company promoter," said Mr. Moore. "I have come here as a producer. I am prepared to take the management of the business, and to take stock in the company that is formed. Mr. Percy Fox, on being called upon to speak relative to the industry, referred to his experience in the Old Land in the woolen business, and offered the advice that the opportunity that was being offered through Mr. Moore was one that would be for the benefit of the city."

TRADE EXPANSION
Mr. Moore replied to questions asked as to the opportunities of the mill in Victoria reaching into the Oriental trade, and also with respect to dyeing.

Mr. Moore said that he believed that the rest of the world with the exception of Canada because of the fact that there was an ideal climate here for manufacturing this product. It was ideal for spinning, being the same as in England, with the added advantage that the season was longer here. The dry frosty weather of the East interfered with this operation.

With respect to the Orient he said that were he established here he would certainly take the opportunity of investigating the entering of that field, but there were obstacles in the way. Japan was the largest importer in the Orient in this line.

Japan was equipped with English machinery in these lines and was in the trade in a large way. The cheaper labor and the longer hours which they were employed worked against the competition with these manufacturers. It was true that both England and Germany were finding a market in the Orient. In his own case he had turned down orders from Japan that came to the mill in Bradford. This was done because of the entering of that field, but there were obstacles in the way. India there were immense mills, and the labor there was a severe competition.

In the matter of dyeing it would not, Mr. Moore thought, be necessary to install at once a dyeing plant here. He could make arrangements to have the dyeing necessary for the yarn that was off color from what was wanted.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Moore. The meeting was presided over by Mr. John Wood.

Philip Jackson, Last of Sappers, Dies in Langley

NEW WESTMINSTER, Oct. 28.—The last of the sappers who landed at the site of New Westminster in 1859, died yesterday in the person of Philip Jackson, ninety-three.

He died at the home of his sister, Mrs. A. Murchison, Langley, where he spent his last years. He was a native of Scotland and had been in the army for many years.

Outside the present site of British Columbia Penitentiary, facing the shore where the detachment landed, is a cairn erected to the memory of those founders of New Westminster, of whom Philip Jackson was the last survivor. Only recently completed, the cairn will be unveiled with impressive ceremony, November 9, when the chief guest, daughter of one of the sappers, will be present.

It was the earnest hope of the Native Sons of British Columbia, Post No. 4, that Philip Jackson should be the chief guest on the occasion, and while it was well known the old pioneer was feeble and failing, the committee in charge had not given up thoughts of having him present.

WOMAN FACES SERIOUS COUNT

Grace Shepherd, Arraigned in City Police Court—Two Chinamen Charged With Keeping Opium

Grace Shepherd was arraigned in the City Police Court before Mr. James Foreman, J.P., yesterday on a charge of obtaining by false pretences two dresses of the value of $6, and the sum of $14 in cash from K. Lee. She was arrested by Detectives Marcus Phillips and William Stark.

Mr. William C. Moresby, who appeared as defence counsel, told the court that he had been instructed only recently to appear, and wished an adjournment to become well acquainted with the circumstances of the case. He asked that the $1,000 bail set by Justice of the Peace Foreman be reduced.

Counsel's request was refused, but the matter was left in the hands of the Chief of Police John Fry and City Prosecutor Claude L. Harrison, for there is a bondman ready to appear who can only offer personal property as security. The case was adjourned until next Tuesday.

Lum and Louis, two Chinamen, charged with being unlawfully in possession of opium, were taken to remanded for hearing until Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Andrew Fox was each fined $2 for turning their money in a part of Belleville Street other than at an intersecting or communicating street.

PLANS OUTLINED FOR CINEMA CITY

STATEMENT IS MADE TO INDUSTRIAL COMMITTEE OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Guarantees High Quality of Productions in Victoria by Men of Recognized Standing

Asking no help from the citizens of Victoria with the exception of that citizens could give him that would be of use in selling Victoria and Vancouver Island to residents of Southern California, where this city is already held in such high regard, Mr. James J. Wright placed the plan he had in view with respect to be added to the business men of the city gathered at the city gathered at the noon luncheon meeting of the Industrial group of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

"We have not taken an option on the 925 acres near Colwood," said Mr. Wright, "but I have bought 925 acres, and we are going to sell Cinema City because we need the money to put in a plant for the production of pictures, and do it without indebtedness."

Mr. Wright said that he was a Canadian and was proud of it. "I know the conservatism of the Canadians," he added. "Having this knowledge he was avoiding the lines that he knew would not be accepted in this country."

One way that would have been open to them in the carrying out of the proposal would be to sell promotion stock. This could have been done, he knew, but he did not wish to take that course. They might also have gone to a group of men who had pulled enough to provide for the building of the motion picture house. This course had also been turned from.

"We propose to sell residential lots and industrial lots in Cinema City and use the money so obtained to build one of the units in the plant. To do this we have to sell Victoria, to sell Cinema City."

Mr. Wright informed the gathering that he was not going into the real estate business. He realized that a business took years of hard work to master.

"We will use as selling agents the organizations already established in the Southern cities," he said. "In the matter of the production of the business Mr. Wright said that he was not at present at liberty to give the name of the man who was to take full charge of that. He, however, was a man whose name was known wherever motion pictures were shown. He had produced some of the greatest pictures that had been produced. These were all historic or educational pictures. He had never produced a comic one."

"The name of this producer, his home and productions have never been besmirched," said Mr. Wright with respect to the man who is to take charge of the production end of the business.

When through the sale of the lots in Cinema City the first unit of the plant is built, the plan will be turned over, he said, to the Canadian National Pictures Limited, which would be incorporated as a Canadian company and the plan would be offered in the enterprise as an investment.

Mrs. Horn Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

Hamilton, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound without a moment's rest for some time. I had a female trouble so badly I could hardly walk. I was so weak and I was all run down and could hardly get around to do my housework. I would be in bed three or four days at a time. I was told by a friend to try your Vegetable Compound. I did, and by the time I took the bottles I was beginning to get around again. I took ten bottles in all, and now I am all right again and doing my own work. I have six girls and two boys. I have plenty to do. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I think it is good. But I owe my health to the Vegetable Compound, and I think if more of it was used women would be better off. I would not be without it. It cost much more," said Mrs. NELIE JAMESON, 805 East Canon Street, Hamilton, Ontario.

Do you feel broken down, nervous and weak sometimes? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful help, and if taken regularly and persistently, will relieve this condition, and had been in the case a "gross miscarriage of justice."

Following the original verbal attack by the Appeal Court justices on Mr. Justice Morrison, the Supreme Court justices sat en banc and handed down a statement, in which they took pains to prepare. But this peculiar kind of judgment, attributed to the Appeal Court justices. This "judicial notice" was a protest against the remarks made by the Appeal Court justices.

Mr. Justice Morrison characterized Mr. Justice Martin's judgment as made up of trite platitudes, trite law and present the facts, garnished with offensive and insulting remarks. Mr. Justice Morrison also charged "gross perversion of fact" in the judgment.

ORIGINAL HEARING

Mr. Justice Morrison remarked that no intimation was given him at the original hearing of the case that the religious aspect of the matter was essential. However, the case seemed, in the eyes of Mr. Justice Martin, to be important enough to justify the posthumous judgment which he took pains to prepare. But this peculiar kind of judgment is not without precedent in the course of Mr. Justice Martin's "long judicial experience." In one case judgment was delivered after his appointment had been cancelled and His Lordship had been relieved of his duties by the Admiralty.

PRIMATE'S FUNERAL

ARMAGH, Ireland, Oct. 28.—Armagh today was a city of sorrow and gloom. Rain fell heavily from the early morning hours, but the streets were crowded with people for Cardinal O'Donnell's funeral.

From the Antipodes came the Right Rev. Patrick Joseph Clune, Archbishop of Australia. President Cosgrave also was represented. Among the mourners were seven Irish bishops who came from Rome, fourteen archbishops and bishops and hundreds of priests.

Every business place and dwelling in Armagh, which is Ireland's ecclesiastical capital, was shuttered or had its blinds drawn.

Cardinal O'Donnell died last week at his summer residence at Carlingford, after several weeks' illness from double pneumonia. He was Roman Catholic primate of Ireland.

SUMAS RECLAMATION

Mr. E. D. Barrow, the Provincial Minister of Agriculture, presumably has the responsibility of collecting the sums due from the farmers in the Sumas reclamation area. The farmers have been protesting against the cost of that development scheme, and there is something in the nature of an impasse reached as to what will be the outcome. It is a matter of provincial-wide interest. The people as a whole are entitled to know if the Government is to collect the sums due, and if in doing so farmers, who claim the land cannot stand the cost, will be forced out of the industry. Mr. Barrow has never given a clear indication of Government policy beyond statements made on behalf of the Government that the money will be collected. The point that the public should know is the amount collected to date and what assurance there is that the full sum will be finally liquidated.

Originally the Sumas reclamation scheme was estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $1,800,000 and the people of Sumas agreed to shoulder this burden. Later they agreed to an increase on this amount. The cost eventually reached $4,000,000, a sum far beyond that originally estimated, and it involves an assessment of $145 an acre, which the settlers say is too great a burden for the land to carry. It is of interest to remember that at the time the project was decided upon the late Mr. T. W. Paterson strongly condemned the scheme, not as a scheme, but for the manner in which the Government undertook it. He predicted almost exactly what has happened, though not publicly, as he was a well-known Liberal and did not desire to hurt the fortunes of the Government. His opinion was that as a preliminary there should have been a competent survey of all the conditions to ascertain the bill of costs, and, in addition, careful boring of the lake bottom so as to find out the nature of the soil as affected by ages of submergence and the possibility of seepage. This was not done, and so the farmers of Sumas, not being engineers, had to trust to the Government's advice. They had a right to be protected in every way and to be insured against excessive expenditure. This is the protection which they did not have and they are now opposing the Government's assessment against their lands. If they are unable to pay, the province as a whole will have to, and that is why the public should be given more information on the subject than the Government seems willing to give. The Sumas scheme is only one of many in which the present Government has indulged in over-expenditures.

THE LATE MR. D. H. MACDOWALL

A true pioneer of the Canadian West has gone to his long home in the passing of Mr. D. H. Macdowall, one who was also esteemed as an old-timer of Victoria. By birth he came here thirty years ago. A Scotchman by birth and a laird by inheritance, he came out to what is now known as the Province of Saskatchewan in the early twenties and lived and labored there for many years, enduring the privations of that sparsely-populated land with true Scotch courage and winning his way to a high place in the estimation of all those with whom he associated. Mr. Macdowall was a member of the House of Commons for many years and during that period, now so long ago, enjoyed the personal friendship and the confidence of Sir John Macdonald, by whom he was regarded as a personal factor of high value in the Conservative Party of that day. Mr. Macdowall's Conservatism was of the persistent order and his interest in his party never wavered, however unequal its fortunes. On coming to Victoria he immediately commenced the study of provincial politics and aligned himself at once as a supporter of the late Sir Richard McBride. Here he was very highly thought of in the Conservative ranks and in many ways he played his part in the success of that political party.

The late Mr. Macdowall's experience of primitive conditions and knowledge of the aborigines of Western Canada led to his appointment as a member of the Indian Lands Commission in 1912, and he worked with the body during the exhaustive investigation it carried out in the province. When his duties in this respect were finished he went into retirement. He was an outstanding illustration of the loyal type of party supporter who was willing always to co-operate with advice but who relied implicitly on the leadership under which he served. He has left an unblemished record of service both in pioneering and politics.

NEW SOUTH WALES VERDICT

In the recent election in the State of New South Wales it is estimated that eighty per cent of the voters went to the polls. The result was the decisive defeat of the Labor Government of Mr. Lang. In the election there was a reversal to single-member constituencies, Proportional Representation having been abolished. The poll, regarded as a very heavy one, is accounted for by general alarm over the recklessness of the financial proposals of the Government. The Nationalist and Country Parties now control the Legislature and will have somewhere in the neighborhood of fifty members between them in a House of ninety. New South Wales is regarded as the pivotal State of the Commonwealth in a political sense and the issue at the late election was a trial of strength between rival ideas of government.

It is significant that the Labor Government went to the polls fortified with a surplus on its last Budget of £1,500,000, but this did not appear to affect the electors because the surplus was derived, as most surpluses are, from additional taxation. With the increased taxation which Labor had imposed it brought additional social reforms, including child endowment legislation. In effect what brought about the Labor Government's defeat was the tendency of Mr. Lang to be responsible to extra-parliamentary bodies—in other words the trade unions. Mr. Lang was a champion of State rights as opposed to Commonwealth rights. He refused to participate in the Loan Council, believing that the credit of New South

Wales should be used to help "States backward in humanitarian legislation."

The verdict of the electorate is significant and will have its effect on Australian politics as a whole. For some time past the growing power of the trade unions in decreasing policies has been looked on askance, for it was felt that parliamentary prestige and influence and the right of elected representatives to reach legislative decisions was being sapped. The defeat of Mr. Lang is a definite repudiation to this course, and, in effect, a triumph for responsible government.

MODERN LITERATURE

Sir Edmund Gosse, the great literary critic, is one of those who, despite his multifarious labors and his seventy-eight years of age, is perennially young. He attributes his youthful viewpoint to the consolations of literature. He has been interviewed by The Liverpool Post on his views on literature, and his opinion is that the changes that have taken place point to the general level of writing being much higher today than it was in the days of his youth. He says a very large number of people write "in a really distinguished way, but, on the other hand, he notes a lack of the creative vitality that there used to be. Sir Edmund notes what the reading public must be remarked, namely, that people write "very carefully and pleasantly over and over the same theme." This means that subjects are getting worn out. Sir Edmund attributes the repetition and reiteration to intellectual fatigue induced by the Great War.

The advance of women in literary effect is another aspect of the modern trend of literature, according to Sir Edmund, and this is not only in novel writing but in science and scholarship. He criticizes the universities to the extent that he believes the centre of intellectual interest has passed away from them and that there is a "very great decline in pure literary interest at the universities." The centre of intellectual interests has passed to the lower middle classes and the upper working classes. The undergraduate no longer cares or knows about standard works. On the contrary there is "an excessive interest, almost a marked interest, in the pure oddities of literature." Sir Edmund is a keen student to the extent of being an author of what he describes as "a terribly long shelf of books." His judgment on the modern trend is probably correct, but he does not attempt to connect it with the latter day tendencies of education.

Germany with 14,000 air miles has now the longest mileage in air routes in the world. France comes second with 8,500 miles. In the British Empire, Australia has now the longest air route, that between Perth and Derby.

The Government of Northern Ireland is to abolish proportional representation. It has already been abolished for local elections. The only opposition to what is proposed comes from the three Labor members and the four Independents and Five Nationalists headed by Mr. Devlin.

"GREEN FIELDS OF ENGLAND"

Green fields of England! where'er
Across this watery waste we fare,
Your image at our hearts we bear,
Green fields of England, everywhere.
Sweet eyes in England, I must see
Past where the waves last comings be,
Ere your loved smile I cease to see,
Sweet eyes in England, dear to me.
Dear home in England, made and fast,
If but in thee my lot lie cast,
The past shall seem a nothing past
To thee, dear home, if won at last;
Dear home in England, won at last.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

The Irish people may have some new-fangled ideas about political affairs, but they retain and cherish all the old-fashioned ideas about social and domestic affairs. When a prominent Free State public man was asked what he thought about the attempt of Miss Ruth Elder to fly in a plane and in company with one more man across the Atlantic Ocean, the prominent Irish public man said he had no time to think about such a trivial thing, but if he thought anything at all about it he would think that the daring lady, being a married woman and not a Miss at all, would have been much better employed if she had stayed at home attending to her children.

Thus we received the first authentic information that Miss Ruth Elder, who had been eulogized in the newspapers as a bold and courageous maiden, fancy free, was in reality a married woman with the modern incubus or impediment of a husband and family. And we know what some husbands are in these degenerate days, particularly if they have attached themselves to resourceful and enterprising wives—utterly incapable of making that is considered suitable provision for their wives and families.

So Miss Ruth Elder reverted back to maidenhood, which is much more romantic than wifehood and will receive much more publicity in the newspapers, and decided to make a name and fortune for herself and her husband and family depending upon her by flying across the Atlantic Ocean, or flying as far as possible across the Atlantic Ocean. If she got across the ocean, she would have a splendid story to tell to the newspapers. If she failed to get across, still luck might attend her, and she would have a still more splendid and more profitable story to tell to the newspapers.

Miss Elder's plan succeeded most admirably. It could not have succeeded more admirably if special arrangements had been made with Providence (which controls the weather) and with the captain of the steamship which came along just at the appointed time and picked her up. Of course representatives of all the big newspapers of the world were on hand when the heroine departed at a place where there happened to be telegraphic communication, expecting to be accorded interviews, with full particulars of one of the most sensational stories ever printed. But Miss Elder is a business woman, and her flight, if in one sense a failure, was in another sense intended to be a success. The bold heroine was willing enough to talk, but absolutely refused to talk except for a substantial consideration. Or rather (for we must be just to the lady) the syndicate which had financed her trip told her she must talk for publication only to the newspaper syndicate which had bought and paid for the exclusive right to print her sensational story.

That sensational story has been "running" in the highly and specially favored newspapers for a week or two, and probably will continue to run for some weeks longer. It is a good story, of course, and probably worth all the money that has been paid for it; but there are sceptics abroad, and they say it is not a true story; that in many respects it is a ridiculous, even an absurd, story. Competent, practical and experienced airplane pilots say that many of the things described of Miss Elder as having happened could not possibly have happened; that some of the sensational stunts Miss Elder says she did could not possibly have been done; that the story of adventure is "touched up" by Miss Elder's imagination just as Miss Elder's complexion was "touched up" by Miss Elder's hand as soon as she reached the rescuing ship and was hidden from prying eyes in one of the cabins of that ship.

There is no doubt that if one is endowed with the gift of writing and with some imagination and sits down to write a story, that the story grows in the act of writing and that the temptation to amplify and elaborate is all but irresistible. But we have no sympathy with the antics of Miss Elder's performance over the water, upon the water, or with the pen. She literally "took her life in her hands" when she embarked on that hazardous enterprise. If she was willing to barter her life for a mere monetary consideration, she is legitimately entitled to make all she can out of her daring venture. Let her sell her story to the highest bidder; let her exhibit herself on the screen for the highest consideration she can get, and no one has the right to blame her. But let no one say that the flight of which Miss Elder is likely to make a fortune (fortunes are made in curious ways these days) was undertaken in the interests of science or for the promotion of the art of aerial navigation. "For it was undertaken for the same purpose as other sensational or hazardous stunts are undertaken—for the purpose of 'getting rich' quickly."

MOTORING TRAGEDIES

Sir—With your permission I would like to suggest a simple little remedy to lessen the number of auto collisions. Hold no inquests; they are only a waste of time and money. Then have a sign or public notice printed in large red letters to the effect that "Bill Sykes" or "Mary Ragan" as the case may be, met disaster at this point on a certain day, and I think, Mr. Editor, it would assuredly have the effect of causing many auto drivers to stop, look at it, and listen.

VIEWS ON MEDICAL RESEARCH

Sir—I cannot find a single instance where I have condemned a practicing doctor, as such, bacteriologists, virologists and health officers who co-operate with the progress of the laboratory. They are entirely different. We have hundreds of eminent doctors who are not afraid to speak against vivisection, and to further this end Dr. Charles Bell Taylor, F.R.C.S., left seventy-five thousand dollars to the Anti-Vivisection Society this year. These vivisectors do not know real disease. They base their knowledge upon the disease which they inject into animals and which is always so different from a human disease, and therefore misleading. For instance, cancer can be formed in mice but not in rats, and this cancer so formed by constant painting with oily tar is an abnormal growth on the back, usually three parts the size of the animal, and millions are yearly so tortured in the name of science.

The Medical Press (England), June 6, 1923, in an article says: "That if the cause and cure of cancer disease were known, the disturbance of vested interests would follow." Even vivisectors themselves disapprove this form of vivisection. Professor Hastings Gilford, F.R.C.S., L.R.C.P. (Eng.) writes to The Lancet, April 24, 1926: "That search for the nature and cause of cancer has now been going on for over half a century. That we have reached the poles, have solved the conundrum of flight, have discovered X-ray and radiating in the telephone and wireless telegraphy, and that while these have been born, matured and even become old, cancer is still incubating and that the history of cancer research carried on by men of ability at enormous expense has ended in confusion. Professor E. H. Starling (vivisector) also said that all these observations on animals were useless unless supplemented by clinical observation. (Royal Commission, Q. 3779). Dr. Hadwen rightly says that it is not science when the experiments are inconclusive, and that this research is conducted entirely wrong methods. I understand that blood-letting has long been obsolete in the medical profession, and should it be consciously used in the process which it quite acquiesces, but not for serum production. The fashion of medicine changes often and doctors are not infrequently in the case of Sir Thomas Horder, who denounces the dietitians. Dr. McCoy sympathizes with people because of this diversity of doctor's opinions. The Ministry of Health's expenditure for the current year in England was reported as over nineteen million pounds; that is, nearly ninety-five million dollars. Well might the great O. Bernard Shaw say that there is a strange irony in giving millions of pounds of money to purchase innumerable mice to play with in their laboratories."

Sooke Harbor Bird Sanctuary

Sir—I see in today's Colonist an article about the above. A similar article appeared in The Victoria Times the previous evening, both omitting the name of the bird sanctuary. The facts are these: For a number of years the ratepayers and residents around Sooke Harbor have been trying to secure incremental protection of the harbor of migratory birds and wild ducks (the former being unlawful). Last Summer the Game Conservation Board, through Mr. Jackson, advised Mr. Hewitt, who is a heavy ratepayer of this district, to get up a petition to the board, which he has done. The Game Board not having decided the matter, Mr. Hewitt called on Mr. Jackson last Wednesday, whereupon Mr. Jackson promised to bring the matter to a meeting for and against a bird sanctuary in Sooke Harbor at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, assuming Mr. Hewitt the opposition would be there. We arrived on time at the appointed place to find neither Mr. Jackson nor the opposition. The Times, or your informant, might say, "Who tipped off by phone the opposition not to come, and for that to Sooke? I am glad to see that another meeting is being arranged and I trust both sides and the full Game Conservation Board will be there."

SUPERFLUITIES SALE

Sir—Please permit a final word regarding the Rotary Club's superfluities sale in aid of the Sanatorium for Crippled Children, and other charities. The success of the sale depends almost entirely upon the securing of sufficient articles to satisfy an assured demand. The ladies of Rotary, under the leadership of Mrs. James Fletcher, have undertaken this task by working among their friends, and reports which have come in indicate that the appeal has been well broadcast and that the response will be generous.

Rotarians themselves are not only giving time and effort, but goods also, among which might be mentioned an Overland car, two tons of coal, two cords of wood, two typewriters, a beautiful dress, and a varied assortment of other articles.

A well supplied home cooking and can department will be conducted by Mrs. T. R. Myers. Many of the stallholders at the public market have agreed to contribute a general assortment of fruits and flowers, poultry, cured meats, garden produce, etc., to make an attractive selection. The committee invites the general public of Victoria and vicinity to contribute goods for this sale, also to attend the sale, where they will find many useful and interesting things to purchase.

The appeal is as wide as the spirit of charity, and as sincere and as deep as the sympathies of our people. Let each and every one contribute according to his means and take his satisfaction in the gleams of gratitude from the eyes of little crippled children.

The sale takes place on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday next, November 2, at the showroom of Mr. Thomas Finley's new garage at the corner of Yates and Vancouver Streets.

Goods may be left at any time at the place of the sale, or will be called for on application to the Rotary Club office, phone 10 or 3209.

Some Tendencies in Modern Painting

By F. H.

A recent exhibition of the work of "young artists" held in London under the auspices of one of the big daily newspapers, was reported as containing few examples of the academic school of painting. The exhibition was characterized as showing the modern tendency to emphasize the abstract qualities of harmony, rhythm and design. Incidentally, to the surprise of many, more than half the exhibits were sold within a few minutes of the opening, showing that the appreciation of this style of painting is fast gaining public support.

The generation ago painting, in the English-speaking countries particularly, was confined very largely to what might be termed the representational and naturalistic schools. The influence of such men as Cezanne, Gauguin and Van Gogh, pioneers of the so-called impressionist school, made very slow progress against the traditional conservatism of the British race. Today, when the world seems more full of abstract ideas of all sorts than at any previous period of its history, every possible type of pictorial representation is found to have its exponents. The scale runs from the "purely representational" at one end to every conceivable abstraction of color and design at the other. True, the Cubists and other extremists seem to have had their day, but there can be little doubt that the emphasis on purely abstract qualities is still the guiding tendency with the majority of modern painters.

COMPROMISE WITH REALITY

As against this modern tendency there is still to be found a considerable body of opinion which holds that "you cannot improve on nature." To this the answer surely is that anything which is more than a photograph is at any rate an attempt to "improve on nature." That is to say that anyone painting a picture cannot depict every aspect of the scene before him; something, be it light, form, pattern or some indefinable quality inherent in the subject itself, is bound to receive emphasis either consciously or unconsciously. The process which takes place between the absorbing of the scene by the mind of the artist and the latter's reproduction of it in his hand is medium. The limitations of the medium itself will in any case cause some sort of compromise with reality, and a further one exists in the fact that lighting effects, etc., are a rule continually changing, so that much of the character of a picture will necessarily have to be supplied from memory. "Keep the first impression" was a medium of both the naturalistic and impressionist schools, and is sound advice to any landscape painter; incidentally implying that the artist will have to rely on his memory and necessarily his knowledge of typical effects of lighting, etc., in order to complete his picture. All of which tends to show that though the artist may not "improve on nature," he is at any rate bound to accept certain compromises in endeavoring to interpret her.

The question then seems to resolve itself into that of the degree to which a compromise with nature is permissible, and in this it is not surprising that many varieties of opinion exist. There are those who endeavor to get as close as possible to an outward representation of things as they appear to the eye, and at the other extreme those who, absorbing a momentary impression, endeavor, possibly away from the scene altogether, to reproduce, with simplification and possible conventionalization of the scene, the particular abstract impression which dominated them when witnessing the scene.

In either case certain fundamental attributes must govern the construction of the picture. Harmony of line, tone and color, balance, rhythm, contrast, variety and unity are the chief qualities which the eye into and keep it moving about the picture—all these qualities are essential if the picture is to be termed a work of pictorial art.

The reason these qualities become more emphasized in abstract work is that the painter is particularly concerned with the necessity for all of them having a place in his composition, and consequently deliberately organizes his forms and values to produce the impression he aims at. On the other hand, when working direct from nature, the faculties are so much engaged with and dominated by the ever-changing appearance of things that the more abstract qualities are much more easily lost sight of.

THE ABSTRACT SCHOOL

The present exhibition of the Arts and Crafts Society includes some interesting examples of both the representational and abstract schools of thought. The work of C. M. Poul, T. Bamford and N. Drummond, to mention but a few, shows concern with the actual appearance of things, without much apparent conscious organizing of form. The interpreting of the actual character of the particular scene is what one feels has engaged the attention of the artist.

In "Twilight," by C. H. Scott, and the very charming water color "Old Logging Trail," by Susan Gibson, one is conscious of more definite emphasis to produce a desired result. The interpreting of the actual lighting have been simplified to a way which somehow brings out its fine poetic quality; in the latter, there is some feeling for the character of the particular scene as well as a sense of the typical, resulting possibly from the broad treatment of actual forms as well as in their very satisfactory arrangement. Both pictures show tendencies toward the impressionist school, of which several examples are to be found in the exhibition. The true impressionist paints as far as possible from the spot, but simplifying color and form so as to produce in organized pattern a definite emotional impression.

"The Goat Woman" and "Glory of Summer," by Kate T. Smith, and "Shadows," by W. P. Weston, are all chiefly concerned with the effect of brilliant sunlight, "Sketch" and "Crown Creek," by F. H. Varley, and "Mountain Mist," by C. H. Scott, all show preoccupation with the emotional atmosphere of the scene before them. The work of H. M. McGovern shows a further break away from the actual towards the abstract. Here one is strongly conscious of the artist's preoccupation with the effect of typical evening lighting. There is very little of the particular in any of his pictures; simplification and unity of form and color, convincing arrangement and close observation of atmospheric effects, combine, as in "Finlayson Arm" and particularly in "Arbutus Trees, Gordon Head," to make pictures which undoubtedly convey a very strong and definite impression.

The Island Arts and Crafts Society is to be congratulated on organizing so successful a show, which, it is reasonable to hope, will next year be even more widely representative of Canadian talent.

Catnip for Cougars

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Catnip is used to catch mountain lions (cougars). If you don't believe it, ask the United States Department of Agriculture, which is growing catnip in the biological survey reserve near Saratoga Springs, N. Y. The catnip crop, which is good this year, is distilled into refined oil, selling at $100 an ounce. Even in this land of expensive distillations that is a high price. But employed as a lure for trapping mountain lions and wildcats, it brings a big return in fur pelts, besides riding some districts in the South and West of a treacherous marauder.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Daily British Colonist of October 29, 1877.)

For San Francisco—The following passengers were booked by the Victoria and Nanaimo Navigation Company for the steamer "Old Logging Trail," which left for Victoria on Saturday, October 27, 1927: Mr. J. P. Hewitt, Dr. McMillan, J. Stewart, J. Finlayson, H. J. Cramb, T. H. White, C. H. Cambie, Geo. A. Campbell, D. O. Campbell, D. Rider, wife and child, A. McLennan, F. A. Campbell, T. Kilman, R. H. Farmer, Samuel Hill, and eleven in the steerage.

Orders—Mr. M. R. Scott, who was exhibiting some large crabs yesterday which had recently been cast ashore in that neighborhood. A similar bivalve is often found on the beach there after a sale. It is possible there is a bed in deep water near Sooke which only needs looking for to make somebody's "pale."

The Big Wussers—The large wussers found by Mr. Alfred Freeman, of this city, can be seen in Mr. Lane's nursery store on Government Street. It is the largest wusser found in British Columbia and will, we hear, shortly be offered up to be raffled for.

Turning Back The Shadow

HISTORY records the story that Hezekiah, king of Judah, fearing that he was near to death, asked, as a sign that he might be spared, that the shadow should move backward upon the sundial of Ahaz.

As Hezekiah, trembling in anticipation, watched, it is said that the shadow slowly ceased its onward course and commenced to move backward around the dial, in token of the fact that fifteen years were added to the life of the king.

Fifteen years of added life meant much to Hezekiah—it would mean much to us today.

Yet we, of this generation, enjoy an average life many years longer than our ancestors just a century ago. These years have been added to the average, individual life—without any seeming miracle—without even very common knowledge, proving that

Trophies Presented by Mrs. J. Carl Pendray—Officials Pronounce Exhibition Up to Expectations

MR. G. E. SERY WINS CATCHING CONTEST

The three-day International Fox and Fur Exhibition held in the Wedder Building closed yesterday evening at 7 o'clock with a total attendance of nearly 3,000.

Officials of the Vancouver Island Registered Silver Fox Breeders' Association, Rev. Montague W. J. Bruce, Mr. D. M. McDonald, Mr. W. Miller Higgs, Mr. N. A. Moore and Mr. H. E. Reid, who were responsible for the exhibition, expressed themselves well satisfied at the attendance and entries, which were from four provinces in Canada and two American states. With forms of all kinds, mink, skunk, raccoon, muskrat and rabbit fur, the show featured the finest aggregation of fur-bearing animals ever displayed in the city. Many inquiries were received about fox pelts and sales are anticipated as a result of the display.

Mrs. J. Carl Pendray presented the many trophies, followed by Mayor Pendray, who expressed an interest in fox farming and its outcome. The fox catching contest was won by Mr. G. E. Sery, who was awarded a trophy for catching one of the furry quadrupeds in twenty seconds.

The House of Rogues

By CHRISTOPHER B. BOOTH

"There is little that I can tell you," he said. "Shortly after breakfast I left the house and took a walk along the beach. I can say positively that the dory was on the beach by the boat-house at that time, but it might have been removed after that, for I walked on along the beach. I did not return for some time. The death of my uncle had occurred almost an hour before I came back to the house. That is all that I can tell you. If I may be allowed to give the jury my opinion—"

"Er—No," broke in the young district attorney. "We must confine ourselves—ah—strictly to the facts. You did not, then, see the second victim, who you call—the three-fingered man, about the beach yesterday morning?"

"I did not see him," said Paul very positively. "at any time or any place until I saw him lying in the sand—dead."

Tommy Oliver's eyes narrowed slightly and sitting next to Baskerville, he gave J.B.'s arm a faint pressure.

"Did you get that, J.B.?" he whispered. "He's a certain young fellow."

"Then unless the coroner desires to examine the witness—or some of the members of the jury, Mr. Grimshaw will be excused," said Oakley.

Dr. McAllister stirred.

"What were the relations between your uncle and Dolliver?" he asked.

"Reasonably friendly," answered Paul. "My uncle was the kind of a man who was bound to have a clash with anyone sooner or later, but I am positive that Bob did not—"

"No opinions, sir, no opinions," cautioned the District Attorney.

"Do you know whether or not your uncle and Dolliver quarreled at any time—even—ah—certainly—certainly—"

"Woman?" asked the coroner.

"Not to my knowledge."

"That will be all, Mr. Grimshaw," Jasper Baskerville moved from his chair and seemed on the verge of asking Dr. McAllister's permission to put a question, but changed his mind.

While he had added Grimshaw to the suspects, he did not consider it wise to say anything just now that might apprise Paul of that fact.

Mrs. Westbury Eastman took the place which Paul Grimshaw vacated and was duly sworn. A night of bitter contemplation on the loss of the fortune which Polly might have had as Mrs. John Strawn and from which she had been cheated by the tragedy had added fresh fuel to the fire of her hatred.

She gave her name, flushed angrily when she was asked to state her age and then settled grimly back in her seat.

"What can you tell us, madam?" demanded the District Attorney.

"A great deal that ought to be told," answered Mrs. Eastman. "There was a quarrel between my finger at Bob Dolliver."

"Mother!" moaned Polly. "Mother, don't!"

"It is my duty to tell what I know," went on Mrs. Eastman, grimly and vengefully firm. "The engagement of my daughter to Mr. Strawn was announced at breakfast yesterday morning. Mr. Dolliver was very much affected. Later he went to Mr. Strawn's house and engaged in a quarrel during which he made threats."

Polly began to sob wildly and lifted her eyes toward Dolliver, pleading for forgiveness, although Dolliver had himself, under Baskerville's questioning the previous afternoon, admitted the quarrel.

"What kind of threats?" encouraged the District Attorney.

"He threatened to kill him!" cried Mrs. Eastman.

"What did you hear him say?"

"I didn't hear it, but my daughter can tell you—if she will."

"She'll tell," grunted Sheriff Edwards. "You bet she'll tell—or go to jail for her own self!"

"What else, Mrs. Eastman?"

"Isn't—aren't that enough?" gasped Polly's mother and a least ten of the twelve heads composing the coroner's jury seemed to nod in agreement.

Bob Dolliver sunk a little lower in his chair, his face beginning to redden as he realized how lightly the net was gathered in about him.

There followed other questions and answers in which she confirmed that Jagers had put in an appearance from the direction of the third floor stairs, that Dolliver had not left the house after the death of Strawn, and that account of a search in the book-room for the "three-fingered man," after Mrs. Kinglake had found the print of the man's hand in the dust of the table.

The jurors smiled in grim, derisive skepticism at this hint of the unexplainable.

Mrs. Kinglake was called, but she had already been forestalled in the role of dark-eyed, sorrowing Nemesis of John Strawn's slayer. While she only had hints and suspicions, Mrs. Eastman had supplied a definite charge to confirm those vague suspicions of hers. In her mind, as in the minds of the jury, there was the slightest doubt of Bob Dolliver's guilt; neither of these two had stopped to reason the complicated aspects of the second tragedy. That, to their minds, was something apart. She was excused without adding anything material.

And then it came Polly Eastman's turn. She rose tremblingly and groped her way toward the witness chair. While Bob Dolliver's previous admission of the quarrel with Strawn had broken the seal which she had herself placed upon her lips, she shrank from confirmation of it. In a faint voice, hardly audible, she gave her name and her age—nineteen.

The young District Attorney had gained much confidence by this time, for he was beginning to feel himself master of the situation.

"Miss Eastman," he said, "you have heard your mother's statement. Is this man, Bob Dolliver, of Salt Spring Island, the bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. John Hepburn, was charming in a gown of green satin and purple tulle, and was attended by her sister, Janet Evelyn Hepburn, very pretty in a frock of georgette and hat to match."

The bride's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Horel left on a honeymoon by the afternoon boat for Vancouver, and afterwards will reside at Fulford Harbor.

Westholme W.A. Sale

A most successful sale of work was held under the auspices of the Westholme W.A. on Thursday afternoon, and was the means of raising $200 for general funds. The Westholme Hall, in which the event was staged, presented a gay appearance. Patrons freely purchased the various articles offered for sale and tried their luck on the numerous competitors or enjoyed afternoon tea. Music was efficiently supplied by Mrs. Spurling during the afternoon. Those in charge of the various booths were: Fancywork and plain sewing, Mrs. McMillan; home cooking, Mrs. Gibbs assisted by Mrs. Dunn and Mrs. Poole; candy, Mrs. Devitt and Mrs. Richards; miscellaneous, Mrs. J. Douglas Groves; white elephant, Mrs. Price and Mrs. Bailey. The tea tables were prettily arranged at the end of the hall, and were in charge of Mrs. D. Groves, assisted by Mrs. James G. Elliot and Mrs. Barker. During the afternoon a beautiful candle, artistically decorated, was competed for and was won by three ladies, Miss Marie Sondergaard being the lucky one in the draw. The candle competition was won by Mrs. Boutout and the ducks went to Mr. B. P. Foster. The Dutch bid caused much merriment. Mrs. Sondergaard was in charge of the fishing pond. Miss Matthews was in charge of the handsome leather purse, which was donated in aid of the W.A., realising $36, and was won by Mrs. Toyne, Chemainus. The Kill-Kats was in the hands of Mrs. and Mrs. Foster, assisted by Miss Bosnall.

The Women's Missionary Society of Oak Bay United Church held its autumn thanksgiving meeting on Thursday afternoon. The speakers for the occasion were Miss Martin, of the Oriental Home of the U.C.C., this city, and Rev. S. S. Peat, recently returned from work upon the Charlotte Islands. Interesting statements of the work prosecuted were given, and the messages were greatly appreciated. Graham, the assurance that the ladies of the congregation are genuinely interested in the activities of the society.

DOCKERS WILL BATTLE CITY

Teams to Clash at Royal Athletic Park in Feature Soccer Match—Wests Play 16th Scottish

SAANICH THISTLES OPPOSE FIVE C'S

Soccer fans of the city will have a wide and varied programme of games to select from today. In all divisions eleven matches are billed and there promises to be plenty of fine exhibitions. First division games will hold the interest, but the junior and juvenile matches will, no doubt, attract their usual following.

Of this lengthy programme, the Equimait-Victoria City argument at the Royal Athletic park should prove the feature contest. The dockers, who stumbled in the first game of the season, are now hitting a fast pace and today their followers have visions of their favorites taking the measure of the city aggregation. Equimait has increased its attacking strength with the inclusion of Tommy Watt, centre forward, and his performance last week was excellent.

THISTLES VS. FIVE C'S

Saanich Thistles, proud occupants of the top berth are billed to meet the fast-moving Five C's at Beacon Hill, lower ground. This match is bringing together two of the youngest aggregations in the senior league and a hard battle is anticipated. The churchmen broke into the win column last week and today will be out to make it two straight at the hands of the undefeated boys from the Saanich municipality.

Victoria West, a second berth team, will face the 16th Canadian Scottish, cellar occupants, at Beacon Hill, upper ground. The green-shirts are anxious to annex the points to keep in the running for the silverware and will be at full strength today.

In addition to the First Division League games the junior and juvenile leagues will be busy with no less than eight matches down for decision.

THE LINE-UPS

Some of today's teams are as follows:

Five C's—Davies, Fraser, Cox, Lorimer, Woodley, Terry, Gibson, Gelling, Smith and Preston.

16th Canadian Scottish—McMichael, Garwood, Stuart, Carmichael, Jackson, Williamson, Obee, Woods, Harris and Carey.

Equimait—Thompson, Smith, Banks, Vickers, Nicol, Woodcock, Stewart, Hicks and Bain. Reserves, Smith and McVane.

Victoria City—Rogers, W. Campbell, Glancy, Leeming, Bob Preston, Bowman, George Preston, Swindell, A. Campbell, Blisset and Belford.

Saanich Thistles—Hetherington, Essler, Harper, Miller, Gaithe, Jim Crowe, Phillips, Minnis, Burns, Saville and Ewing. Reserves, Price, Victoria West—Sidd Sherratt, Geddes, Dunn, Passmore, Phipps, Dwyer, Jim Sherratt, Collins, Mulcahy, Brown and Shanks.

World-Famous Stories

MATEO FALCONE

By PROSPER MERIMEE

(Prosper Merimee, 1803-1870, was a fairly well-known French writer of stories. He was a Parisian by birth. He earned his living as a lawyer. Writing was more of a hobby than an occupation. He was chiefly honored during his lifetime with various political offices. His name rests principally on one story, "Carmen," but that fame has made his other tales incidentally famous as well.)

When you come out of Porto Vecchio, on the island of Corsica, and forest. Then, after his crop is harvested, the ground rises very rapidly, with next Spring thick shoots will sprout huge masses of rock and deep gorges, to an open plateau. can a man make his way through. So if you have a good gun and ammunition with you, it's a safe place to live. Take a brown cloak, with a hood, for blanket and mattress. The shepherds will feed you, and you will need fear only when you go to town to replenish your ammunition.

Mateo Falcone's house was about a mile from this maquis. For that country and time—it was in the early nineteenth century—Mateo Falcone was regarded as a rich man. He was approaching fifty years of age, and a crack shot. His skill with a gun was really extraordinary. They tell in Corsica that at night Mateo Falcone could extinguish a candle, hidden behind a thin piece of paper, with one shot, and then, in complete darkness and holding his aim, wait a full minute and pierce the paper three times out of four. It was no wonder that Mateo Falcone had a great reputation; he was said to be a loyal friend and a dangerous enemy.

When Mateo Falcone married, his first three children were girls, which enraged him. Next came a son, the hope of the family and the heir of its name, whom Mateo named Fortunato. The girls were married well, and their father could count, if need be, on the guns of his sons-in-law. Fortunato was ten years old, and a promising lad.

One day Mateo and his wife had to leave the house to see some distant flock. Fortunato was left in charge of the place. The boy idled away the day, and was thinking of a forthcoming holiday, when he heard a gunshot, and then more shots. Finally a man appeared on the path from the plain—he dragged himself painfully along, wounded in the thigh. He was a bandit, an outlaw; he had gone to town for ammunition and had fallen into an ambush of soldiers on the way back. His wound made his escape to the maquis impossible without help. He appealed to the boy, as the son of Mateo Falcone, to help him.

Fortunato objected that he could not do it without his father's permission. The bandit pleaded, then threatened, then appealed to the boy's family pride. At last Fortunato said: "What will you give me if I do it?" The bandit offered a coin. Fortunato grasped it eagerly and said: "Don't be afraid." Quickly he scooped out a hole in the haystack near by. The bandit crouched down in it and the boy covered him up, putting a little of the straw in the way making the stack appear as usual. He acted with the cunning of a savage. He put a cat and her kittens on top of the haystack, and it appeared that the stack had stood untouched for a long time. Then he carefully sifted dust over the bloodstains along the path by the house. Then he stretched out in the sun quite unconcerned.

Six men in uniform arrived a few minutes later. An adjutant, a distant relative of Mateo Falcone's, commanded them. His name was Gamba; he was energetic and renowned for hunting down many an outlaw. He was greatly scared by the bandit. Seeing Fortunato, he asked him whether any man had passed. The boy merely repeated the officer's question in a foolish manner. Gamba grew exasperated, but he persisted. He was sure the boy had seen the bandit, and yet he had not. Gamba had the house searched, but to no avail. And all this while Fortunato petted the cat and pretended to be asleep. The boy told Fortunato that for his conduct towards the officers, and then: "Here is a fine watch, if you give it to me. The bandit went, or where you have hidden him, and I'll give it to you."

Fortunato eyed the watch stealthily, just as a cat does when one gives her a whole chicken. The boy wanted to know for a certainty that the watch would be his. He was finally convinced, as he eyed Gamba, that the man meant to give him the watch. Then came the inner conflict between greed and hospitality, between a viable gain and an abstract principle. If he gave up the bandit he'd get the watch; if he protected the bandit and lived up to his name he would get nothing. At last the watch won. He grabbed it and jerked a thumb over his shoulder to indicate the haystack.

The bandit tossed Fortunato, and the boy guiltily turned him the coin he had received. The bandit spun it, and asked merely that a comfortable litter be prepared for him, as he was badly wounded. At this moment Mateo Falcone and his wife appeared.

Gamba became uneasy, hardly knowing what Mateo would think. He approached the house and looked at Fortunato in concentrated anger. "Well, you have made a pretty beginning," he said.

"Fortunato," cried Mateo. "Fortunato," repeated his wife. "Yes," said Gamba. He said he would see to it that the boy got a nice reward, and Mateo Falcone would be mentioned in the report.

"Curse you!" said Mateo and came before the house. The bandit spat toward the door when he saw Mateo, and said: "The house of a traitor!"

Fortunato saw that he had not done right. He offered the bandit some cold milk. "Keep off me," said the outlaw, and then, to a soldier, "Comrade, give me a drink of water." The wounded man was given a drink, then was adjusted on the litter and taken away.

Mateo did not speak for fully ten minutes. He leaned on his gun and looked at Fortunato in concentrated anger. "Well, you have made a pretty beginning," he said.

"Father," the boy cried, with tears in his eyes. "Away from me!" shouted Mateo. Then the boy's mother noticed the watch. "Where did you get it?" she asked.

"From the officer," said Fortunato, whereupon Mateo seized the watch and flung it against a stone, where it broke apart.

"This boy is the first traitor of his race," said Mateo then, and Fortunato sobbed aloud. He shouldered his gun and called to his son to follow him into the maquis. The boy's mother, in a fright, kissed her son and went into the house to pray.

In a little while, when the ground was soft and easy to dig, Mateo told his son to stand by a rock. "Pray!" he said, in a terrible voice.

"Father," said Fortunato, "forgive me. I'll never do it again. I will beg that the bandit be pardoned." Mateo loaded his rifle and took aim. "May God forgive you!" he said. He pulled the trigger; his son fell dead.

MAN COMPOUND OF CHEMICALS

May Be Turned Out in Laboratories and Charged at Service Stations

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Oct. 28.—Psychologists here for the world psychological symposium at Wittenberg College the other night heard a chemist vision a day when "living beings may be artificially produced in a chemical laboratory," and "personally changed by use of chemical compounds."

Visions portrayed by Dr. Edwin S. Slosson, Washington, D.C., who addressed the psychologists at a banquet celebrating the dedication recently of the new Wittenberg Psychological Chemistry Building were based on the recent laboratory discoveries of chemists and psychologists.

STATURE AND CHARACTER
The chemist of future will provide from his humble task of turning the conveniences of life and gain control of life itself, Dr. Slosson said. "He may hold stature and character as the sculptor his clay. He can turn his attention to the proportion of compounds that will contribute to human welfare instead of woe and stimulate virtue and vices."

"Jacques Loeb showed us frogs who had no father but a fatty acid, and he held artificial production of living beings from lifeless matter might some time be achieved in the laboratory. The factory of heredity and the origin of the species, when you get down to bedrock, are chemical problems," Dr. Slosson told the psychologists.

SUGAR BASIS OF COURAGE
"What we value as individuality—fascinating temperament, charms of vivacity, woe and sympathy—are all due to definite harmonies, some of which are already known as chemical compounds. Courage is not a matter of 'and,' but of sugar."

"Diabetic patients who are gripped with a form of fear from an overdose of insulin may have their courage immediately restored by sucking a lollipop. A variation of a few hundredths of one per cent of glucose in the blood may make the difference between cowardice and courage; may determine whether a man shall be shot as a slacker or medaled as a hero."

"Sex must be regarded as essentially a chemical affair which might be regulated, repressed, stimulated or reversed by minute amounts of certain definite compounds in the blood or food. Experimentation is already active in this field and none can foretell how far it will lead. Problems of so-called race suicide may be solved by the chemist," Dr. Slosson said.

Scientists Say Whales Dote on Prickly Peter

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Bringing valuable data about whales gleaned by a two-year expedition of Antarctic waters, the exploration ship Discovery has returned.

Financed by the Government of the Falkland Islands, the Discovery which took Captain Scott on his fatal last journey to the Antarctic, left England in 1925. On board were scientists who have been studying the whale with the view to averting ruin to the whaling industry in the South Seas in the way it has been ruined in the North by indiscriminate slaughter.

Dr. Stanley W. Kemp, in charge of the expedition, said that a large amount of information had been collected. It was found that the humpbacked whale was diminishing in numbers, but it was not learned whether this was due to the popularity of this species with whalers or to changed migratory habits. Blue while the fin whale, the expedition found, was as abundant as ever. It was established that at times whales migrated in herds of one sex.

The scientists shot darts into a large number of whales for identification purposes. Although they encountered rough weather several times they had no particularly dangerous adventures.

Discoveries favored by the whale also were collected by the expedition. They included an Antarctic crab known as Prickly Peter. The expedition left a land station to continue researches at Grytvick, So. Ge. All the members of the research staff and crew of the Discovery are in good health. Although they encountered rough weather several times they had no particularly dangerous adventures.

AUSTRALIAN SHIPS REPORT PILFERING

Amazing Figures of Pilfering in Commonwealth Services Are Disclosed in Report

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Amazing figures of the extent of pilfering in Australian services were disclosed in the report of the sub-committee of the Ship Owners, Merchants, Chambers of Commerce and Protection and Indemnity Association. The most startling of the discoveries is that thirty per cent of one indemnity association's round voyage cargo claims for three years arose in the Australian trade, fifty per cent being on Australian cargoes, thirty per cent on New Zealand, twenty per cent covering all others.

The ships carrying cargoes on which the figures of this association are based totalled 742, only fifty of which are exclusively engaged in the Australasian trade. Shipowners trading with Australia have paid £176,000 in claims during the past three years. Further figures, embracing 110 steamers, show that the claims average £2 2s per ton on pilferable cargo. The amounts on nine lines paid for pilfered or short-landed cargoes, were as follows:

COURTENAY, Oct. 27.—The ploughing matches held here on Wednesday, under the auspices of the Agricultural Association, drew over 100 spectators. The committee had carefully prepared and marked out the soil on Mr. W. A. Urquhart's farm. In the senior match Mr. James Reid was first with a score of eighty points. The match for citizens was completed for by three of the city's aldermen, who finished in the following order: Mayor McKenzie, second, and Alderman E. L. Macdonald, third. The standard of ploughing in the civic class was not high. Mr. S. J. Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found how to save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for results. It gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a 10-oz. bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 10 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying, throat-tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness or broucheal asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaracol, known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.
